Why Chinese New Year is Celebrated in Winter

Like Christmas in the other countries, Chinese New Year is China's much-needed winter holiday.

It was set to coincide with the slack time just before a new year of farm work begins, as a time of preparation. Traditionally most Chinese were farmers, so this made sense. Now 55% of China's population is urban (a generation ago it was 25%), but 100+ million return to their rural roots for CNY.

Chinese New Year 2016 will be a year of the Monkey. For people born in a year of the monkey (1920, 1932, 1944, 1956, 1968, 1980, 1992, 2004), 2016

"Monkeys" are witty, intelligent and have a magnetic personality...
